The War .-- BY ALFRED TENNYSON. There is a sound of thunder afar, Storm in the South that darkens the day, Storm of battle and thunder of war, Well, if it do not roll our way, Storm! storm! Riflemen! storm! Ready, be ready to meet the storm ! Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form ! Be not deaf to the sound that warns! Be not gull'd by a despot's plea! Are figs of thistles, or grapes of thorns? How should a despot set men free?

Form! form! Riflemen form!

Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form ! Let your Reforms for a moment go, Look to your butts and take good aims. Better a rotten borough or so, Than a rotten fleet or a city in flames ! Form! form! Riflemen form! Ready, be ready to meet the storm ! Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!

Ready, be ready to meet the storm?

Form, be ready to do or die! Form in Freedom's name and the Queen's! True, that we have a faithful ally, But only the devil knows what he means. Form! form! Riflemen form! Ready, be ready to meet the storm! Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!

France and Austria, for thirty years, continued in peaceful relations and even in close alliance, an alliance cemented by a royal marriage; for Louis XVI. married the sister of the Austrian Emperor, the beautiful daughter of the high-spirited Maria Theresa. At the breaking out of the French Revolution, Austria was the most formidable rival with which the new republic had to deal, for it had grown rich, powerful, and was always ready for war. Maria Theresa was succeeded by her son Joseph II. in 1780, who died in 1790, and his suc-

At this time the French Revolution broke out .-Louis XVI. considered himself, from the date of his return to Paris, Oct. 5, 1789, as a prisoner in the hands of his people; and (December, 1790,) he addressed a circular to the crowned heads-which he charged them to keep in "the most absolute secresy,"-asking them to meet in a congress and provide for an armed force to N PURSUANCE OF A DECREE of the Court of Equity "arrest the factions" of France, establish a more desirafor New Hanover County, in this cause made, at Spring ble order of things in that kingdom, and prevent the malady under which it labored from extending to the beginning at the corner of Chestnut street and running vor of putting down the French Republicans by an arm-

At length the Court of Vienna agreed with them, and the famous Pilnitz treaty, August 27, 1791, was formed by Austria and Prussia. They invoked other powers to join forces "in order to put the King of France in a situation to lay the foundation of a monarchical government conformable alike to the rights of sovereigns and the well-being of the French nation." These two powers avowed that they were ready "to act promptly with forces necessary to that end," and promised to give the necessary orders for troops to hold themselves in readicrowned heads which in American books, should always be put distinctly in the foreground, as a cause of that entirely extraneous work, the Jacobin massacres, in that advance movement in the political world, the French Revolution.

A little later (July 24, 1792,) Austria and Prussia declared war on Republican France, and a manifesto thus states the grand object of the war :-

" To put an end to anarchy in France, to establish for this urpose a legal power on the essential basis of a monarchical form, and by thus giving security to other governments against the incendiary attempts and efforts of a frantic troop. Such is the grand object which the King, conjointly with his Austria, then, the main stirrer up of an alliance against France in order to interfere with its internal government; thus positively to degrade a great and independent people; to prevent such a people-as frankly avowed-from establishing any other form of government than such form as the King might assent to; thus to secure to one man a power to thwar! the wishes and will of a whole people. The mere statement of this case ought to be enough to secure to Austria, forever, the utter condemnation of the American political world; for no other judgment can be passed on a purpose so utterly subversive of the vital principle of the independence of nations. Thus Austria led in a crusade against what it regarded heretical politics, and in favor of what it held to be ties of Duplin, Wayne, Johnston, Harnett, Moore, legitimate government; briefer yet, she went to war for an opinion. Her subsequent relations with France down to 1815 were but her parts of one great drama; likely young Negroes, of all classes and descriptions, avails her object was to restore legitimate monarchy to France. himself of this method of informing those who may have It would be profitless to go into details, and columns would be required even to state the territorial changes that occurred down to the Vienna settlement. By the Campo Formio treaty or truce Austria lost a million and a half of population in Belgium and Lombardy; by the Marengo war she lost another large slice of territory; and thus vanquished she kept the peace four years. COME ALL YOU THAT WANT LARGE PRICES But then war broke out afresh between Austria and for NEGROES, and give me a call, or address me at France. Would any one see a curious instance of the way Napoleon the nephew follows Napoleon the uncle? The expose of Austria's violation of the treaty of Luneville, read in the French Chambers, (Sept. 23, 1805,) is not unlike what appears to-day in the French expose of Austria's violations of the treaty of 1815, prefaced too with a strain of remark on the earnest longing of to pay the highest cash prices. Persons having such France for peace and on the glory of peace! The profor sale would do well to give me a call, or address me at clamation of the Austrian Emperor, Oct. 28, 1805, is equally carnest for peace; equally accusatory of France, and, in announcing war, says its object is "to combat for the liberties of Europe and the securities of thrones and THE SUBSCRIBER IS IN MARKET FOR A number nations." The Italy proclamation, which preceded the of likely Negroes, MEN AND WOMEN, BOYS AND Austrian, by "Prince Eugene, Viceroy of Italy, Arch

> "People of the kingdom of Italy, the Cabinet of Vienna has determined upon war, both against you and the French people. That Cabinet has dared to say, that the war has been provoked by France and Italy.' This proclamation closes as follows:—

> "People of Italy: Napoleon relies entirely upon you: rely entirely upon him. Napoleon has on his side the God of armies, always terrible to the perjured. He has in his favor his own glory, his genius, the justice of his cause, the valor and fidelity of the people of Italy. Our enemies shall be vanquished."

> And vanquished they were at Austerlitz, after which Austria lost three millions of population. After a peace of three years, there was another war, which the terrible day of Wagram closed. Then Napoleon had Austria in his hand, but, he said, "he neglected to parcel it out." It ceded all its sea coast, three millions of population, and Maria Louisa, the daughter of the Emperor, became the wife of the conqueror. "My marriage ruined me," said Napoleon at St. Helena. "I set foot on an abyss, concealed by a bed of flowers." For a year or two Austria, playing treachery and seeking revenge, kept aloof, but from fear alone; and when she saw victory upon victory crown the armies of the Allies, and France hunted down, she too struck in at the death, took part in the invasion of France, and in the Vienna Congress got back, minus four hundred square miles of territory, what she had lost since she entered upon the work of keeping the Bourbons on their throne. 1815 то 1859.
